RIGHTS OVER VIADUCT.

The hasty work on the part of the Ogden Rapid Transit company a week ago in laying temporary ties and rails east on Twenty-fourth street from Wall avenue, was the cause of much speculation. It has been definitely learned that the street car company claimed a prior right to occurs the laimed a prior right to occupy the treet, over the railroad companies to construct a viaduct and in order to proceed that right took the steps necessary. Since then a meeting has been had between representatives of all concerned and it is stated a compromise has been reached whereby the street car company is to have first right of a track over the viaduct and will help to defray the expenses of keeping up the roadbed on the viaduct just as soon as it occuries it.

(Special to the "News,")

Washintgon, Dec. 34.-An unusually large number of bills have been introduced in the house this session to establish fish hatcheries in various states. Nearly every measure calls for an appropriation of $25,000, that sum being generally regarded as the necessary on to provide what the member wants, It is expected that during this session a general bill will be passed providindg hatcheries in a number of states that have none now. It will be framed by the merchant marine and fisheries committee. The last bill to go through Congress for a fish hatchery was that offered by the late famous "Private" John M. Allen of Mississippi. Just as he was about to close his congressional career after serving continuously for 16 years he got his bill through by making a most humorous speech. It was impossible for the house to resist the appeal, and, although only a few days of the session remained, the senate accepted the measure without amendment, and it was without quickly by the late President McKinley The latter also appointed "Private" Allen a member of the national commission in connection with the Louisiana Purchase exposition.

A DETAIL, BUT NECESSARY.

The last time "Private" Allen was in Washington, on being asked how his fish hatchery was getting along at Tupelo, he said: "Well, it is doing about as well as might be expected. The main trouble down at Tupelo is that we are a little shy of water, and somehow you are bound to have plenty of water if you run a fish hatchery successfully."

NOT AN EASY POSITION.

John H. White, who died here the other day, was for 29 years the official stenographer of the house of representatives. Few men can stand the strain of such a position for so lon a period. Reporting the debates in the house is much more difficult than in the senate. The hall of the house is much larger than the senate chamber, and the members of the lower is much larger than the senate chamber, and the members of the lower branch of Conress cannot be broken of the habit of interjecting questions, four or five at a time, when there is a running debate of a lively nature. ranging for 'ts annual banquet on next Saturday night, when it expects to out-do all previous efforts in that line. The most difficult reporting for any of the stenographers is in the committees of Congress when important hearings are had and recalcitrant witnesses have to be examined. At times four or five members of the committee may engage in the questioning, and the witness, instead of answering directly, will evade and try to get into a heated argument with his questioner. SLOW IN SETTLING DEBTS.

The United States has never yet set, tied entirely with the state of Virginia and the city of Baltimore for the money borrowed just after the close of the second war with Great Britain. During that war the British burned the capitol at Washington and some of the department buildings. Uncle Sam practically had no money in the treasury and had to borrow funds is rebuild. The late Thomas B. Reed of Maine, before he became speaker, had a claim pf $13 which he tried for many years to get paid at the treasury to a lighthouse keeper on the Maine coast. He was put off so long that he finally paid the money out of his own pocket. It made him so mad that one day at the capitol he declared that the United States government was a scoundrel when it came to a question of paying amounts due to poor devils like his lighthouse keeper.
